Trainer: Christian Duckworth

After many years teaching in Special Education, Christian moved into teaching ICT in Primary Schools as part of a government funded programme to bring ICT into Primary Education. She has visited a number of European countries both to learn about their use of Information Technology in schools and to present some of her own projects, particularly those involving collaboration between children in multiple European countries. Christian is particularly interested in coding, programming and basic robotics. In the late 1990s she began using an Apple iMac, for film making and editing and attended training with Apple educators. With the introduction of iPads the possibilities for young children to use individual tablets to design and write programs fascinated her and she has been fortunate to work with educators and program designers from around the world.

Cost: £76 per person including refreshments

Cost - £65 per person for members of the Catholic Teaching Alliance.*
